USER

Going to the link:

https://studies.cs.Helsinki.fi/exampleapp/notes

HTTP GET request: where the web browser and server communicate through HTTP protocol. HTML code is being processes by the browser and producing the content and structure of the page from the server.

HTML code links → CSS style sheets (HTTP GET : https://studies.cs.Helsinki.fi/exampleapp/notes/main .css)

HTML code → Javascript code (HTTP GET : https://studies.cs.Helsinki.fi/exampleapp/notes/main .js)

With the use of attributes action and method, which submits the form and proceed as done to the HTTP post request ti the adress new_note.

Data is being sent as the body of the post-request

Submitting forms produces HTTP requests.
Fetching / processing:
Main.css , main.js , data.json (CSS, Javascript code, raw data)

Browser will execute the javascript code

New note now is being shown to the note page ☺

The browser shows the information/page to the browser

HTTP Post (sends data to the server) request to the server address new_note → URL redirect

Create a new note → SAVE

The notes page contains a "form-element" where it allows users to enter data that will be sent to the web server for processing and storing, or used to update the interface immediately.

Cline Casano
Full stack 2022
University of Helsinki